THEY PICTURE EARLY MISSOURI

Books of Travel In This State In Bibliography By F. A. Sampson.

A bibliography of books of travel in Missouri has been published in the January number of the Missouri Historical Review, a periodical edited by F. A. Sampson Secretary of the State Historical Society. One hundred reprints of this article have been made. All of the 120 books named are found in the State Historical Library. Most of them are accounts by early travelers, one of the earliest being "Travels in America" by Thomas Ashe, which tells of a trip up the Mississippi River in 1806. "Views of Louisiana" by H. M. Brackenridge is the journal of a voyage up the Missouri River in 1811.

One book describes early Boone County and Columbia. Its title is "Years of Experience," and it is an autobiographical narrative by Georgiana Bruce Kirby, who came to teach in the Bonne Femme Seminary in the eastern part of Boone County.
In this book Miss Kirby describes a trip to Columbia at the time the University opened in 1840.

Another interesting book is "Prison Life and Reflections" by George Thompson. In 1851 Thompson and his two companions, Work and Burr, crossed over from Illinois and arranged to take some slaves to Canada. The slaves deserted them and the three men were arrested near Hannibal and tried in Palmyra. Mark Twain's father was one of the jurymen and the prisoners were sentenced to the penitentiary and served one or two years, when they were pardoned by the governor. The book describes the trip and the arrest and imprisonment.

"An Excursion Through the Slave States," written by G. V. Feather-stonhaugh in 1844, describes the early towns in Eastern Missouri. He speaks of the waiters in St. Louis as being "no better than a pack of monkeys trained three months."

Joel Palmer's "Journals of Travels Over the Rock Mountains" written in 1847, describes St. Charles, Booneville, Rocheport and Independence.

There are several rare books in this which were extremely hard to get. They are Christian Jun Schultz's accounts of his western travels, Gottfried Duden's description of Missouri in German which was obtained in Europe, and two publications from Italy by Prof. Cav. G. Capellini, which describes Northern Missouri in 1864.

John Bradbury's travels in 1810 and L'Brugier's scientific articles written in 1811 tell of the New Madrid earthquake.

ENGLISH AS SEEN IN CHINA

Queer Blunders Are Made, But Style Shows Much Improvement.

Education is doing much for the Chinese, especially in improving their English. The following letter was sent to a student by his father, who received it from a Chinese merchant:

"Dear Sir,
Please you pay the bill. This now business (business) not is very good.
I am very thanks for you. Please you put post-office send to me. I am very very thanks for you."

Here is another business letter:
"Dear Sir, We received your note from the Shun Tah and co where we read all about it."

"We were sorry to say for that we could not send you the board immediately; on account of the board was durable and must send the applicant to the customs house and paid the duty or get the free permit before we can ship."

"As the above business was unconvenient for us to be done for you, and therefore we think you had better to intrust the business to the shipper companies or your friends, then the troubleless will be all over."

"Hoping your favorable answer, etc."

Socialist Talks to Begin Sunday.
